Sperm Technique Helps Parents Choose Child's Sex

By Walter Sullivan

New York Times Service NEW YORK - Scientists at Keio University in Tokyo have developed a new technique of sperm selection that they believe will enable parents to select the sex of their child with a high rate of success, especially when a girl is sought. The Japanese technique, developed by Dr. Rihachi Iizuka, differs from the most widely used method, developed by Dr. Ronald J. Ericsson of Las Vegas, Nevada. In the laboratory, Dr. lizuka said, the method can separate sperm into layers, one

95 percent female and one 85 percent male. Dr. Izuka has reported success in all six attempts so far to produce girls. When reports of Dr. lizuka's procedure were published in Japan last year, they unleashed a furor. Opponents argued that

A fair amount of the sparring occurred be-tween the co-anchors, Peter Jennings of ABC and Mr. Zolotarevsky, as they tried to steer the discussion in sometimes different directions and around a series of U.S. commercial breaks.

Early in the program, Mr. Jennings explained to Soviet viewers: "And now we're going to do something that those of you in the Soviet Union may not be accustomed to - we're going to let some of our sponsors try to convince us to buy their products."

Joining Marshal Akhromeyev on the Soviet panel were Lev N. Tolkunov, chairman of one of the two chambers of the Supreme Soviet; Georgi M. Korniyenko, a senior Communist Party official, and Yevgeni P. Velikhov, vicepresident of the Academy of Sciences. In Washington were Senator Sam Nunn,

There was a sharp exchange when Mr. Kor-niyenko cited a recent U.S. poll in which 44 percent of those questioned said they believed the Soviet Union had fought on the side of Nazi Germany in World War II.

"This sort of ignorance is what brings mis-trust," said Mr. Korniyenko. "I know a number of people who have a close knowledge of the Soviet Union who don't trust you entirely either," Mr. Aspin retorted. When Mr. Nunn argued that Soviet conventional forces in Europe should be scaled back, Mr. Akhromeyev dismissed as "a legend" Western assertions that the East Bloc has an advan-

MADRAS, India (Reuters) — India has sent a 1,200-strong paramili-tary force to Sri Lanka to back up its 8,000 troops who are enforcing a peace agreement on the island, official sources said Wednesday. The sources said the paramilitary force was airhifted from this city in southern India to the Northern and Eastern provinces of Sri Lanka on Monday and Tuesday and that an additional 1,200 paramilitary troops were expected to be flown there later. The new troops were sent at Sri Lanka's request to help maintain law and order in the two provinces, where at least 6,000 people were killed in a four-year rebellion by Tamil separatists. PANAMA CTTY (Reuters) --- Almost 5,000 protesters, dancing and chanting anti-government slogans, marched through the capital to demchanning and-government stogans, matched through the capital to dem-onstrate against the military leader, General Antonio Manuel Noriega. The marchers danced Tuesday to chants of "Justice! Justice!" while drivers in cars following the procession honked their horns in unison. Panama has been hit by almost daily protests since June, when a dissident colonel accused General Noriega of political murder, vote rigging and other crimes. The general has denied the charges.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for one of Panama's two independent television channels said the government had re-imposed censorship on its coverage of local news, accusing it of broadcasting misinformation. A spokesman for Canal Four said the station would resume transmitting only international news. The channel began reporting local news Monday and Tuesday for the first time since July.

OAU Meets on Chad-Libva Conflict

LUSAKA, Zambia (Reuters) — Five African presidents met Wednes-day in Zambia to try to find a lasting solution to the conflict between Chad and Libya, but the Libyan leader, Colonel Moammar Gadhafi, did not attend.

President Hissène Habré of Chad, however, attended the special Organization of African Unity meeting called by President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, who is OAU chairman. Also present were the presidents of Gabon, Mozambique and Senegal. Western diplomats said Colonel Gadhafr's absence made success doubtful for the latest peacemaking efforts of the organization, which negotiated a cease-fire that has been in effect since Sept. 11. The Libyan news agency JANA said Colonel Gadhafi would be represented by Foreign Minister Jadallah Azouz al-Tahli. Zambian officials said the Libyan delegation was headed by an ambassador.

Seeking a Gulf Peace

Iran Hangs Back

A quiet and urgent effort is alive at the United Nations to produce a cease-fire and settlement in the seven-year-old Iran-Iraq war. The effort rests on maintaining a consistent approach between the Security Council, especially the two great powers, and the secretary-general. The United States and the Soviet Union are playing, in their ways, the role of enforcer. Javier Pérez de Cuéllar is the would-be mediator. The striking thing is not the difficulty of their joint task - that is a given - but the cautious hope they share that a breakthrough could be near.

The military incident in the Gulf Monday night produced a great swell of anger on Tuesday from Iran's president, Ali Khamenei. Yet Iran has received scant international sympathy, and Americans seem nervous but generally supportive of this use of the U.S. Navy --- the purpose for which it was sent to the Gulf. A boat of the revolutionary guards had just shot up a British tanker. What U.S. helicopters are reported to have hit was a ship of the regular Iranian navy that had been spotted laying mines in international waters and was found to have 10 more mines aboard. After his protest, Mr. Khamenei picked up the discreet discussions that the secretary-general has been conducting with Iran to nail down its response to the unanimous UN peace appeal. President Reagan, speaking on Monday, had challenged President Khamenei to state "clearly and unequivocally" whether Iran accepts the UN appeal. Iran states nothing clearly and unequivocally. Still, the diplomatic pressures on Iran mount. Iraq gains wider acceptance for its view that a cease-fire confined to sea is unfair and one-sided, and it extends attacks by its superior and practically unchallenged air force. Not all Security Council members are as ready as Washington to press on to a second resolution demanding an arms embargo against Iran. But the case for ending the flow of arms to Iran has never been so forcefully made. The huge political risks that Iran was earlier willing to take in opening arms-for-hostages dealings with the "great Satan" hint at its vulnerability even to a slowing of the flow. The United Nations resolution offers

Iran as well as Iraq great benefit. Of special potential value to Tehran is the unusual provision, one drafted with its requirements in mind, creating a commission to examine how the war began. Iraq already says yes. Iran, increasingly isolated, hangs back.

-THE WASHINGTON POST.

A Hard-Line Speech

It was Iran's turn to speak on Tuesday before the green marble at the United Nations, and the world waited with unusual anticipation. Would Iran heed the UN call for a cease-fire in its war with Iraq? What would Iran say about its attack Monday on a British tanker? What could Iran say about its vessel caught by the U.S. Navy laying mines in the Gulf? What the world heard was a truculent, hard-line speech by President Ali Khamenei reject-ing as a "pack nf lies" the reports of minelaying by the vessel. The ship, crew and unlaid mines are now in Bahrain. The evidence should soon be available to the Security Council, and the world. If the charge stands, Iran will have been caught in a reckless act of war - an offense that could finally impel the world to bring down on Iran an arms embargo.

The time is ripe for the Reagan administration at last to get its Gulf policy in order. There are now signs of operational improvements. The United States attacked the Iranian vessel while it was laying mines in international waters under cover of darkness. The navy, whose helicopters lack night vision devices, used army helicopters, which have them, to catch the Iranians in the act. Policy vision is likewise improving. Washington initially rushed in pretending to a strict neutrality in the seven-year-old war between Iran and Iraq. Compounding the blunder, President Reagan failed to invoke the War Powers Act, which requires him to inform Congress when U.S. forces face imminent hostilities and to pull them out in 60 days unless Congress approves their mission The confusion is beginning to lift. Mr. Reagan's remarks at the United Nations on Monday make plain that he sees Tehran's behavior, not Moscow's, at the heart of the present crisis. Iran's radical adventurism threatens regional stability, moderate Arab states and the world's oil interests. With more candid American recognition of that has come European support. What started Kuwaiti ships and thwart the Soviet Union is now an allied effort to thwart Iran. Having clarified the policy, the administration needs now to make it explicit, notifying Congress as provided by the War Powers Act. Doing so is the precondition to building support for an obviously risky operation. Officials say no; invoking the act might unnerve Arab states by suggesting that America had only 60 days in which to move. But invoking it would show Iran unmistakably that America is united behind the policy. Washington is trying to build a coalition at the Security Council, which has already unanimously approved a resolution calling for a cease-fire in the Gulf war on pain of incurring an arms embargo. By continuing that effort, the United States increases pressure on the Soviet Union and China to join in voting a second resolution that would impose an arms embargo on Iran.

as a muddled American effort to reflag

Iraq has agreed to a cease-fire, a crucial matter on which Mr. Khamenei was arrogantly evasive. Thus whatever Iraq's responsibility for starting the conflict, blame for prolonging the slaughter lies squarely on Iran. There comes a point when prolonging the war is itself a war crime, especially after the Security Council has served an ultimatum on the belligerents. The machinery exists, in Washington and in the United Nations, to shorten this war - if the world will only use it. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Middle East: The Power Cards Have Been Re-Dealt

A weekend's intense discussion with Israelis and Arabs at a conference of the International Institute for Strategic Studies - an occasion for professionals to talk frankly across national and ideological barriers --- left one with both a conviction of change and a sense, however slight, of opportunity. Syria is in Lebanon today because of its belief that Syrian security is at stake. Since 1975, when civil war began in Lebanon, Syrian policy has not been aggressive or revisionist toward Lebanon but conservative, intended to prevent partition or the establishment of any power hostile to Syria, while avoiding a war with Israel that Syrians recognize they would lose. This policy reflects Syria's historical relationship to Lebanon, which did not become a separate state until 1926 and gained full independence only after World War II. Even then, the two tach the specifically Lebanese ele-

The United States backed that plan, which failed, at heavy cost to all Israel retreated from Lebanon in 1985, wounded and wiser, Realists in Israel now say that if Israel cannot pacify Lebanon, someone must, even if it is Syria. In effect, they say to the Syrians: Welcome to Lebanon; much good may it do you. Leave us our security zone; keep your distance from our frontier. But can Syria pacify Lebanon? The prudent answer is that if the Syrians cannot do it, no one can, but that the job probably is beyond the capacity even of the Syrians. Lebanon now internalizes - encapsulates - the deepest conflicts of the region. To de-orators such as Neil Kinnock, leader of the British fascinating account of how Lee Jacocca's best-

Iran, which sponsors the radical Shiites in Lebanon, has no solution, either, since the moderate and Sunni Moslem communities, the PLO, the secular nationalists, the Drug, the Christians - all are against them.

No community can seriously expect to establish itself over the others. Each will fight to keep the others from ruling. Syria's advantage is that it sponsors no single community, tolerates all and is ready to subvert or betray each in the interest of its own dominance. Moscow is returning in strength to Middle Eastern diplomacy because Washington is no longer a credible mediator among the region's contend-ing parties. When Anwar Sadat exled the Russians from Egypt in the mid-1970s, America moved to sponsor the "moderate" Arabs as well as Israel, and thus arbitrate the region's conflicts. It believed that the Soviet Union. could be kept permanently on the margins, without real influence. But the United States failed to produce a settlement that went beyond the Camp David agreements between Israel and Egypt. And the Reagan

dministration, once in office, shifted U.S. policy to one of virtually unqualined support for Israel. When Mikhail Gorbachev came to power, Moscow mated its support for radical Middle Eastern forces and cultivated influence among the other Arshe whose confidence in America had faded. There have been overtures to Israel. There now is widening to an international conference on the Middle East in which the Soviet Union would play a prominent role. It is assumed that no settlement is possible without Soviet recognition and active support.

Thus have the cards been re-dealt, a fact still inadequately recognized in American debates, although it is understood in Jerusalem. Washington used to assume that the United States ultimately could dominate whatever hancened in the Middle East, and so it has been in no hurry to do politically difficult things to alter the basic situation. Its preoccupation with revolutionary Iran, and now with the Gulf war, have provided further distractions. But the situation emerging is one that the United States does not and cannot dominate, and the time has come to pay attention.

nization began life with no fewer than three "original sins." The first was that its areas of responsibility were intrinsically areas of ideological confrontation. All UN agencies are political, and to talk about the "politicization" of this or that agency is not enlightening. How-ever, only in UNESCO was ideological confrontation unavoidably on the agenda from the beginning And while there can be compromises in politics, they are much more difficult in the field of ideology.

To live with the resulting problem, successive heads of UNESCO, from the British biologist Julian Huxley in the '40s to the French educator René Mahen in the 70s, wild to find pape in the general ideological confrontation where it would be possible to develop limited areas of cooperation. They performed this task with con-siderable success over the years, but it called for fine judgment, sensitivity and an absence of partisanship. Second, UNESCO was put in charge of organizing intergovernmental cooperation in areas in which governments often have nothing or very little to say. How do you organize intergovernmental cooperation in the social sciences? Where are the ministries of social science? How do you organize such cooperation in the fields of communication when in many countries, it is considered vital to the health of society that governments should have very little control over information? The same holds for culture once one goes beyond the superficial level of "exchanges."

Third, UNESCO was virtually the only agency not created to take charge of a big well-defined interna-tional system. If there were no Universal Postal Union, it would have to be invented; coordination of the world's postal services into a coherent system requires it. If there were no International Telecommunication Union, the same would be true. UNESCO, on the other hand, was put in charge of areas - education, science, culture - that do not represent discrete systems at the interna-

The Japanese Example

Two years ago, when the dollar was sky before the effect of this part of the agreement high, autoworkers' carnings in Japan were two-fifths the American level. In West Germany they were less than two-thirds those of Americans. Now, with the drop in the exchange rates, carnings in the Japanese auto factories are nearly three-quarters, and in West Germany they are equal to, those paid in America. The swing in currency values has given the American automakers an enormous opportunity. They no longer carry the burden of large wage differentials that they carried through most of this decade. But to make the most of this turn in their fortunes, the companies and the United Auto Workers have to keep American wages under tight restraint.

Ford's new contract with the UAW does that. Departing from a long tradition, it gives first importance to job security instead of wage increases. In a company that has cut its labor force almost in half during the past decade, security is a compelling issue. Ford and the union have been moving in that direction for some years, but this contract promises a degree of assurance that earlier attempts were unable to deliver.

In return, the union has offered a new flexibility in work rules. It will be some time becomes clear, since work rules are negotiated plant by plant. But they will greatly influence the actual cost of this contract to Ford. While the security provisions are not going to he inexpensive, the impact on Ford's total labor costs may turn out to be substantially diminished if productivity accelerates.

contract can serve as a prototype for the UAW in dealing with other companies, nota-bly General Motors. The difference between the two companies is that Ford has now largely completed the labor reductions that it considered essential, while GM has not. But here again the work rules, and the possibility of relaxing them, may prove a powerful incentive for an unorthodox agreement.

In the days when American automakers did not have to worry about foreign competition, they happily paid high wages, and the whole labor force rode the roller coaster of a highly cyclical industry. Now, in at least one company, the rule is tighter control of wages accompanied by something that begins to look like a pledge of lifetime emolovment. The Japanese influence evidently is not limited to the size of the cars.

Other Comment

For Coordination in the Gulf

In political, moral and perhaps legal terms the U.S. Navy's action is well justified. The threat which [Iran and Iraq] have posed to neutral shipping in the Gulf is intolerable. There is a serious risk of Iranian retaliation against Washington. The need for coordination between countries with an interest in the region has never been stronger. This has been the most serious clash between Iran and any big power since navies increased their activities in the Gulf. One must hope that it will serve as a salutary shock to everyone's systern. It reinforces the need for an arms embargo on both countries and should strengthen the resolve of those who are struggling to bring this ugly conflict to an end.

Except for some unrepentant Stalinists in the Writer's Union, Mikhail Gorbachev has successfully enlisted the Soviet intelligentsia to back his reforms. Freedom to publish has not yet been realized but writers are no longer afraid to speak their minds.

The Soviet intellectual class seems willing to be co-opted — after all, what is the alternative? — and it is a much more pliable ally than the military, agricultural and industrial sectors of society. For Democrats, the prototype is a dim and distorted memory of John Kennedy. For most of his tragically abbreviated political career, he was an endearingly awful speaker, mouthing choppy phrases in a Boston brogue accented with choppy stures. Most of his most memorable utterances (including the 1961 Inaugural Address and even his Pulitzer Prize book, "Profiles in Courage") were in large part written for him by others. Biden apologists note that even Ronald Rea-gan has occasionally lifted a line or two without attribution, including FDR's line about "a ren-dezvous with destiny." But of course that line (like, say, "fourscore and seven years ago" or

But the problem now has sunk well beyond mere ghostwriting. In the past, you could safely assume that even borrowed lines accurately reflected the thought and character of the speaker. No longer. Mr. Biden, snitching Mr. Kinnock's tear-jerk lines about his long-suffering ancestors in the coal mines, is simply engaging in a flimflam. No Biden ancestor is known to have been a miner, although one was a mining engineer.

In fact, all this hand-me-down stuff is no more an authentic reflection of the speaker's character than a playscript is of an actor's. It is calculated to sound the cliches of the hour, to create an effect, to manipulate emotions. These three characteristics have made UNESCO the most valuerable of all international organizations. The crisis that it now faces results from the combination of these inherent weaknesses and the disastrous management provided by its current director-general, Amadon Mahtar M'Bow, a Senegalese.

It has been a despotic management, demoralizing the secretariat and alienating many member coun-trics. It has been an ideological management, deliberately substituting confrontation for cooperation. It has been a reckless manag cment, wasting scarce resources and dissipating good will. The public image of the organi-zation is catastrophically bad. It damages the whole cause of international cooperation by confirming the prejudices of its opponents. If it does not want to destroy the Moscow Book Fair: A New Mood Amid Old Worries organization, the executive board must emphatically reject the idea of a third mandate for Mr. M'Bow. He has said that he will not seek a third term, be nasty, either. Andrei Sakharov but if the board does not unite behind one of the many able candidates for the job, he is likely to get it anyway. That would spell the end of UNESCO. The executive bound should propose a candidate of unchallengeable integnity whose commitment to interna tional cooperation, the free circulation of information and the defense of human rights would bring back the United States and Britain. It should propose a candidate capable of bringing the organization back to a program centered on "conflict-free zones" such as the promotion of scientific cooperation and the fostering of literacy.

Such a person - no matter where he or she came from - would easily be elected in November by the general conference and turn the page on a tragic period in the life of UNESCO. The New York Times few weeks later - on the day before a cancerons tumor caused Mr. Casey's brain seizure — I solicited a call from my longtime friend, who had been displaying uncharacteristic testiness for the past year. The sudden appearance in the arms dealings of Roy Furmark, a former client of Mr. Casey's and mine in years gone by, struck me as evidence of Mr. Casey's early and deep involvement in the entire Iran-contra operation. Mr. Casey called from his Long Island home three times that Sunday to assure me that the CIA had nothing to do with the fund diversion, that this was-really an Israeli operation, that Colonel North was on his own, and that Mr. Furmark had revealed the diversion only a month before. Admiral Pom-denter's testimony suggests not — but that disinformation specialist is an admit-ied destroyer of presidential findings, and it is evident that his intention is to stop the blame from going higher than him-self. Colonel North says yes — but be-eause that acknowledged liar needs all the high level prior approval he can get the high-level prior approval he can get, it serves his interest to implicate the deceased director of central intelligence in what a grand jury may deem to be awbreaking. So the Annapolis adven-nurers cancel each other out.

Mr. Casey's favorite operatives in Spooksville, who were assigned by him to guide and translate for Colonel North, would have us believe that their departed boss was innocent of any knowledge of the diversion; but the wide circle of Casey admirers cannot conceive of so perceptive and wide-ranging a mind aot knowing of such a central part of his fishiest operation. Mr. Casey's friends split between those who do not want him remembered as a knave and those who refuse to let him appear the fool. You might think that Attorney Gener-

Mr. Sharansky does not know the West very well (whatever he conceives "the West" to be). Form over substance is the norm in much of the media, so he should not have been surprised that complex topics of interest to him were not immediately addressed in the newsmagazine he mentions.

2. To compare the post-Stalin years with the post-Chemenko period is invalid. Mr. Sharansky would not have sur-vived the 1948-1953 "anti-cosmospoli-tan" campaign, but he did survive his nine years in prison under Leonid Brezhnev. One can understand Mr. Sharansky's bitterness, but his obdurate refusal to recognize the realities of change in Russia is disappointing. 3. Glasnost must work both ways -- as it does in "the West." Nazi-like racist groups have always existed in Russia, as the West. Exposing the diseases of racism and narrow nationalism to the light of day may, in conditions of relative prosperity, serve to reduce the infec-tion. At least that is the theory in the-West. We may hope for at least as much in a Russia that still has anti-racist legislation somewhere in its legal codes. 4. One wonders whether Mr. Sharansky has read the Soviet press since he left Russia. One finds in it almost daily exposures of police brutality and illegalities; exposures of abuse of power by local party rulers; re-examinations of

5. What is "the Communist system" whose limitations Mr. Sharansky cites as precloding improvements in Russia? "Stalinist system," yes. Its limitations are under constant discussion in the Soviet press. Thus a process of evolution is under way in Russia. The results over the next 20 years are unpredictable, but we should hope for the best — for rising

A Statistic Among Others

In the editorial "Keep the Pressure On" (Sept. 14), The Washington Post advocates a position that if adopted could lead to skewed U.S. policy-making regarding human rights issues in the Soviet Union. The Post argued that the extent of Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union is a "fair" test of glasnost, thereby relegating to secondary status the millions of non-Russians who unfortunately have no refuge outside the U.S.S.R. The term "non-Russians" is used lest it be forgotten that the Slavic nations now part of the U.S.S.R. were once liberated by czarist, Leninist or Stalinist Russia in much the same way as Afghanistan is liberated today.

handed and critically perceptive. Evidence of continuing Russification programs, persecution of dissidents of all faiths and a tradition of putting the Russian stamp on all East European history are also "fair" indicators for testing of glasnost. It is dangerous to suggest that any one statistic ought to be preferred in the making of policy. GEORGE BARAN.

Paris. Another Social Engineer

In response to the editorial "A Mission of Peace" (Sept. 15):

Having watched Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic Republic for more than eight years, how can world policy makers still believe that the Iranian regime can eventually come to understand peaceful coexistence, reason and cooperation? Have we not yet truly grasped the ethos of the Islamic Re-public? How can a government that is prepared to sacrifice the lives of hundreds of thousands of its people for the continuation of a savage war, all for a mere condemnation of Iraq as the ag-gressor by the world community, be expected to bring peace to the region? Do world policy makers need to witness further acts of aggression and expansionism by Iran in order to finally see the commonality between its leader and the great social engineers of our time: Hitler, Stalin, Pol Pot, Mussolini, Mao? What will it take for the world to recognize that history is repeating itself? A. KASHANL

A Small Bandage for Angola

The editorial "African Famine, Again" (Sept. 16) speaks of "Moscow's billions in aid" to Angola going to guns, and casts tha United States as the "principal pro-vider of humanitarian food aid to Angolans." These are remarkable statements. Angola has received very little Soviet aid. It pays for its military equipment, to a substantial extent, in cash; the rest is a substantial extent, in cash; the rest is loans which form a significant portion of its foreign debt. It needs those arms in large part because Angola has had South African invaders on its soil virtually from the day of its independence in 1975. In addition, the UNITA rebels turned in the mid-1970s from collaboration with the Portugal of Antonio Salazar and Marcello Caetano to become a South African proxy force complete with anns, logistical support, technical officers and mercenary brigades. The United States has chosen to become South Africa's indirect military ally in support of UNITA. The reported U.S. support for these South African agents exceeds its humanitarian contribution to the relief of Angolans hungry or starving primarily as a result of rebel terrorism. The United States is in any event by no means the largest provider of food aid to Angola; past levels of about 12,000 tons a year have in fact been very small. To present Angola as a recipient of UNICEF Solution to Save Thousands of Babies Daily.

One of the most important single factors responsible for the death of five million children a year is not drought or famine. It's dehydration caused by diarrhoea.

Until recently, the only known treatment for dehydration was an expensive intravenous drip - available only to the fortunate few in the developing world who live near a hospital or clinic. But now there is a solution that works almost instantly, costs almost nothing and is available to nearly every family. It is a ten-cent sachet of Oral Rehydration Salts; a simple , mixture of salt and sugar that, when combined with water, quickly replaces the vital fluids drained by diarrhoea. Today this miraculous solution saves the lives of over 1,300 children in the developing world - daily. And a lot more could be saved.

Blacks' Scores Rise On Admission Tests For U.S. Colleges

NEW YORK - Black high school students across the United States are making steady gains in the scores they achieve on standardized college admission tests, the twn major testing agencies have reported.

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1987

Sooner Than Expected, Ethiopia Is Again Gripped by Drought

By Blaine Harden Washington Post Service

MAKALE, Ethiopia - Gebre Miriam Ehiwot has done what good Ethiopian farmers are supposed to d0.

When the rains came in May, he planted corn. When the rains failed in July and his corn died, he plowed it under and tried again. He planted teff, a short-season grain. But again the rain, after sputtering for 22 days in August, failed.

"From now onward, there is nothing to be harvested," Mr. Gebre, 46, said last week. He stood in a field of teff, which by mid-September should be knee-high and flowering. Instead, the spindly crop was three inches high

"It is hopeless," Mr. Gebre said. "God wants to nish us. God is angry."

Mr. Gebre's fields are in the highlands of Tigre, the heart of Ethiopia's famine region. Records dat-ing back to 1890 show that every 8 to 10 years, there is drought and famine in these rocky highlands. Tigre's farmers like Mr. Gebre expect it.

What they do not expect, what they ascribe to divine retribution, is that widespread drought should strike just three years after the drought of 1984, which is believed to have been the worst of the century.

About 1.4 million people in Tigre were destitute then. More than 120,000 of them descended on the regional capital, Makale. Starving, diseased and oddly passive, they died at a rate of more than 100 a day as they waited for someone to feed them. "The drought situation is more or less the same as it was in 1984," said Brother Caesar Bullo, who now, as then, coordinates emergency operations in Tigre

for the Roman Catholic Secretariat. "The difference is that this year there is a famine-relief structure. There is a food distribution system, and there is time. "If we can get food and send it outside to the farms, we can avoid the creation of the shelters where so many people died."

Tigre and Eritrea, the two northernmost regions of Ethiopia, are again the hardest hit parts of this country as drought has forced the government to appeal for nearly a million tons of food aid.

A survey in August by a team from the U.S. Agency for International Development reported a total crop failure in Eritrea and a 75 percent crop failure in Tigre. The regions have a combined popu-lation of about 5.1 million people.

Most people in Eritrea and Tigre are thought to be in a predicament akin to that of Mr. Gebre.

He has little food left in his house from last year's ood harvest. His wife and four children are not yet ungry or sick. But he said that unless they could get food, they soon would be.

The food emergency in Ethiopia, which may re-quire as much outside food aid and transportation equipment as the huge famine relief operation in 1984-85, does not yet have the emotional hook of severely malnourished people.

"If you don't have some nice pictures of starving children, I don't know how the public will respond," said Jean-Jacques Fresard, chief delegate in Ethiopia for the International Committee of the Red Cross. "There may be a problem of getting food this time." The United Nations' World Food Program said that "dramatically increased" food aid needs in Tigre would start in November and continue until vember 1988.

The U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa has sent an emergency request to Washington for 115,000 tons of food to be delivered around the first of the year. The European Community and the World Food Program are preparing a similar request for $5,000 tons of food.

Until that food arrives, donors say they will try to divert to the north all food aid en route to Ethiopia. Those stocks are expected to be exhausted by Janu-

"It is most important that stocks be moved as soon as the increased needs manifest themselves," a World Food Program report said. "Otherwise, people will move toward towns as in 1984-85, and shelters will be established with consequent water, sanitation and health problems."

It is believed that a large proportion of the one million deaths in Ethiopia in the last famine occurred in famine shelters, which were breeding grounds for infectious disease.

In Tigre, the prevention of famine is complicated by civil war.

Most of Tigre outside the regional capital is con-trolled by rebels of the Tigre Peoples' Liberation Front. In the 1984-85 famine, relief officials repeat-edly accused the government of indifference to starvation in the rebel-held areas.

The government in Addis Ababa, about 300 miles south of Makale, made almost no effort to transport food to Makale until a television crew arrived in the fall of 1984 and shot footage of starving calidren. The pictures touched off worldwide interest in Ethiopia and led to a billion-dollar rehef effort. Yet even after the government appealed for large-scale assistance, relief workers complained that officials in Addis Ababa were reluctant to assemble military convoys to escort food into Tigre.

Expected delays in overland delivery of food to Tigre this year have already prompted the Interna-tional Committee of the Red Cross to prepare to resume emergency airlifts to Makale. The airlift was used extensively in 1984-85.

The abrupt end of the August rains after 22 days came after a July drought. The drought was widespread throughout Tigre and Eritrea, and it was total, without a day of rain.

Like almost all farmers in Ethiopia, farmers in Tigre are dependent from year to year on rain. They use little fertilizer or improved seed. Even after a very good harvest, like the 1986 harvest, most farmers store no more than a year's supply of food." "For us the biniting factor is the rain," said Habtu

Twolde, regional director of the government relief commission. "If there is no rain, there is nothing."

The July drought started a panic over food prices, The price of grain and fruit doubled in the Makale market as farmers began to hoard. The price of meat dropped by half as farmers began to sell livestock that they feared they would be unable to feed.

The drought catches Tigre in the midst of building small dams in guilles that are supposed to help ease the effort of the next famine --- the one expected in about eight years, not the one now.

Although the drought has limited the amount of water there is to catch, the dams are likely to help more people and livestock survive in 1988 than in 1984-85.

The dams were built under food-for-work plans in which farmers are paid about seven pounds of grain for a day's work. The program has been used with success across Ethiopia in the last three years as a way of feeding destitute people without fostering dependence on handouts.

The Key to Offshore Success

IVEN the nature of business in Cayman, it is not surprising that the most central figure would be that of Financial Secretary. No single position is more instrumental in seeing that all the varied parts of this complex financial industry fit together into a single whole. Thomas Jefferson, who has held this key post for the past five years, talks about the job and its responsibilities. Will you explain the importance of the position of Financial Secretary to Cayman? Because the Inspector of Banks and Trusts, the Superintendent of Insurance and the Registrar of Companies all report to him, the Financial Secretary takes ultimate responsibility for all aspects of Cayman's financial industry. He is the spokesman to the government for the financial community, and sometimes vice versa. The Financial Secrerary is a member of the economic council, which consists of the governor, four elected members and three officials myself, the Attorney General and Administrative Secretary. How do your goals and objectives, and those of the government in general, relate to Cayman's role as an offshore financial cen-

Our aims are mainly synonymous with those of the private sector; we all wish to see the financial sector develop so that it will provide a good standard of living, education and health for the people of the Cayman Islands. The govmment and private sector, through various committees which I chair, work very closely together to achieve this end. Of course our business concern is to realize profit. Therefore, on the government side we developed a five-year plan along with the Inspector of Banks. This is due to expire in 1990, so we are updating it.

In 1987 the Caymans became the largest offshore financial center. Do you now foresee continued growth or consolidation?

I think a period of consolidation took place in 1984 and 1985 when the world's economy was not in the best shape. It gave us a chance to lonk at our weaknesses and strengths and to formulate the direcoons in which we wished to go. Now, since the latter half of 1985, we have had an upsurge in growth, and I think that is likely to continue. Like any country, we have cycles and we are affected by the worldwide economy, by what happens in the United States and the U.K. and elsewhere.

Do you then believe there will be continued growth in the financial sector?

Yes, because I think the world of finance is continuously getting smaller. Of course when you have 500 banks you ask yourself bow many more are out there to attract? But we continue to receive inquiries and some areas that have not heavily turned to offshore centers may now start to do so. At the same time I think that more use of the banks which are already here is likely to take place. That will mean increased volumes of work, an increase in the number of transactions flowing through Cayman. Some of the banks already here, holding "A" licences, or unrestricted "B" licences, are establishing their own offices here, in order to do portfolio management and crading, etc. I think that this will account for a lot of growth in the next five years.

On the insurance side, I think the field is wide open. While some countries have treaties, establishing themselves as insurance centers (like Barbados and hopefully Bermuda), Cayman's business does not depend on a treaty and we have grown to be the second largest offshore captive insurance center in the world. Although I am more familiar with the insurance crisis in the United States, I understand that the crunch is growing in the U.K. in particular and elsewhere as well.

The whole insurance business is risky, and I think the worldwide inability to buy insurance will be with us for a long time. But the positive aspects of Cayman - our poliocal stability, our links with the U.K., our financial support industry of accountants, lawyers, underwriting management companies - continue to make us attractive, and we will stay that way, for years to come.

The fiscal position of the goverroment is extremely sound, with a $90 million budget and debts of only $9 million - requiring a debt service of only 3 cents on the dollar. That is an extraordinary achievement, particularly considering all the construction and development going on in Cayman today. How do you explain it?

In the world of finance, I believe that you have to use all of your skills and techniques to ensure that people do not spend more money than they can afford and this should apply to government too, A country earns only a certain amount per year, and you have to prioritize the number of "projects and ensure that a certain number are revenue cam-

ers. The Cayman government and public have a built-in philosophy that says we must balance our budget and have a modest surplus. That means not borrowing more than you can afford because servicing those loans puts a strain on the budget.

There sooms to be a desire not to overdevelop Cayman. What are the restraints? It is correct to say that we do not wish to overdevelop. We are wrestling with something that few countries in this day and age need to think about -growing too fast. We are growing at a rate that is too fast for our children to be serviced, educated, grown up and claim the jobs that are being created for them. With a significant growth of 10 percent you can wind up wich more expansion than Caymanians. It is not a matter of not wanting strangers, but of wanting to preserve what we all like so much about living in the Caymans.

It is the environmental aspect, the traditions and case of life that we are a little concerned about.

The Mutual Legal Assistance Treasy has been a major development over the past year. Will you explain the ramifications of the Ireaty?

The move we made in 1984 to sign the "Narco" treaty which the U.K. signed on our behalf with the United States really said to people, "If you are dealing with drugs, do not come to Cayman." Nobody wants that unsavory money and we are telling those involved with it that they cannot hide behind our confidentiality laws which is a valuable and legitimate protection for respectable business.

In the 1984 treaty we undertake to assist the U.S. on the investigation and prosecution of a wider range of cases of common criminality including such offenses as insider

I think what has happened is that over the period from August 1984 when the narcotics agreement came into effect, we have had a maximum of 60 notices to assist out of the tens of thousands of transactions that have been made here. Most of those notices came at the beginning and represented a backlog of cases. Since then the number has rapered off dramatically, and it is true to say that very few if any have been coming in recent days. All told they have added up to 64 notices, but very few are of recent origin. To what specifically do you attribute Cayman's growth?

Our stability, our tax-free climate, our absence of restrictions on real estate ownership, our currency movement, as well as our confidentiality law, all played important parts in building our financial indus-

Five years ago, when I took office, we saw a need to look at our regulatory systems and the responsiveness of our legislature. We moved on to legislate regulations that show we are not out for numbers but for quality business. We will not even accept certain amounts of money. At the same time many of the banks are now creating marketing sections because what we want is quality business.

I am certain there will be a lot of growth in Cayman in the next five or ten years, not only from the financial side but also from tourism and hotel development, along with support services industry. As you grow, you always create the need for more growth.

Have developments such as increased financial globalization, deregulation in many countries, the "big bang," and 24 bour trading let to an increased awareness of offshore financial centers?

The perception of the offshore financial center is growing among governments. They are realizing that this is something that will be with us for a long time. Even the U.K. and the U.S. are looking for some of the offshore business.

regulatory tole is one of the most important factors in the success of Cayman as an offshore financial center. The Inspector of Banks is loaned temporatily to Cayman through the International Monetary Fund with the objective of developing Czyman as a major banking center with standards as high as any other center in the world.

There are also, as always, administrative problems to consider. Cayman has about 505 banks but, of these, only 64 have an actual physical presence. The remainder operare outside the island, where the majority are branches or subsidiaries of major banks.

It is noticeable that those coming to Cayman are the major international banks. It is not impossible for small privace banks, but it is not as

It was the bottom of the last insurance cycle, and insurance companies were losing a lot of money, especially with the phenomenal awards that courts were granting to malpractice and other claimants. In 1984 the whole market changed. Rates went way up and hundreds of companies pulled out of certain risk areas altogether. An alternative to the newly expensive insurance, called the "deep pocket theory," inspired a whole space of captive insurance companies to be set up offshore, and the Cayman Islands became one of the fastest growing offshore captive insurance markets. There are now 415 captive insurance companies established in Cayman. Their average capitalization is $1-2 millinn and their average premium income is $3-4 million. The largest, with capitalization of $750 million, is a joint association of 40 or 50 Fortune 500 companies.

Simultaneously, a support services industry second to none has grown up in Cayman, including the vital position of superintendent of insurance, the ten largest accounting firms in the world (including all of the U.S. "big eight"), a number of highly prestigious and well-connected legal firms, a sophisticated banking industry with access to all international currency markets, and 31 full-service underwriting management firms.

Some of the latter include Johnson & Higgins, Marsh McClellan, The Transnational Group, which is a subsidiary of the Reiss Organization of Shannon, Ireland, and Samuel Montagu & Co., which is part of the Midland Bank Group of Great Britain.

"During the two liability crises of 1975 and 1984 the

'mainstreet' companies suffered major losses. Their reaction was to wipe out certain policies, regardless of past experience with particular clients. As a result, major corporations and insurces made heavy commitments in joint venture operations," said Donald Westmoreland, president of the Cayman Underwriting Managers Association and managing director of Transnational Risk Management Limited

"There seems little likelihood that those organizations will be persuaded to abandon their captive insurance companies in the foreseeable future, having once again suffered the extreme cyclical behavior of conventional markets."

While small insurces need the solidity of a big company, the large company is solvent enough to rely on its own captive insurance. This then creates lower administrative costs as well as lower premiums. Secondly, it enables a captive to go to international "wholesale markets" for its reinsurance.

ly owned subsidiary of its parent, insures the entire needs of the parent and then turns around and buys reinsurance. Cash flow benefits accrue since premiums are paid quarterly and can be invested for the interim. The captive also cams commission from the reinsurance company.

Most important, the captive gives the insurce a degree of flexibility unavailable elsewhere. "If you own your own insurance company, you can write the insurance you want," said Donald Westmoreland."

"Sharing cisks is the cssence of insurance," said Mr. Westmoreland, "When the big corporations insure their corporations through a joint venture captive, they can then turn to the joint venture captive for most reinsurance. This is the state-of-the-art end of

Although an article which appeared in the International Herald Tribune on August 10 reported that there were no buyers for these expensive notes, analysis believe that the project itself was not faulty, but only premature. According to the IHT article, "the concept was the most fatreaching plan to date" to deal with the collapse of that market.

"This kind of creative inscrument is a by-product of out coming of age and having achieved recognition," said Peter Tomkins, president of Cayman National Bank.

As enormous as the offshore financial markets have become, the feeling of partnership as opposed to aggressive competition prevails. Most trust companies have their networks and contacts through other jurisdictions and all rrust companies provide investment services.

"Since interest rates came down, there is more incentive to invest, and so this is where our security company comes in," said Mr. Sharaf al Hassan, manager of the Bank of Credit and Commerce (BCCI). "The fact that there is no capital gains tax or profit tax is of course the ptime motive for being here," said Richard Fear, managing director of Morgan Grenfell. "At first you would get private investors setting up trusts, but you wouldn't get large capital market transactions, such as

"Wherever the trust is administered, Cayman Islands law prevails," said Mr. Travers. "However, this presupposes that assets actually be transferred to the Cayman Islands trustee. For example, if Peruvian law says that you may not transfer assets, where the law will not assist is where the grantor has not transferred his assets. Therefore Peru becomes the dominant jurisdicoon. Now, if the assets are already outside Peru, say the grantor has business in New York and his assets are never repatriated to Peru, then, we believe, our law is effective.

This new law is also beneficial to common law jurisdictions which have exchange control laws. "We consider the Trusts (Foreign Elements) Law a brilliant piece of legislation which gives relief to thousands of investors with assets outside their own countrics who would stand to lose those hard-earned assets because of restrictive and penalizing laws," Mr. Tomkins said

OURISM, while extraordinarily successful in the Cayman Islands, is somewhat of a misnomer. For 430,000 visitors each year the islands are a place to do pretty much as the locals do. That means living in the attractive condominiums that stretch along the powder-soft sands of Seven Mile Beach, dining on marinated conch and turtle dishes, and, most of all, diving and snorkeling.

The country is made up of three islands, Cayman Brac with a total population of 74 people, Little Cayman and Grand Cayman, the largest. No one can visit without succumbing to the lure of their underwater environs.

What Saint Moritz is to skiing, Cayman is to scuba diving - an aficionado's dream. For non-swimmers, the Atlantic submarine dives 1,000 feet among the grouper and bright blue angel fish.

Despite the relaxed atmosphere, development is taking place. This year saw the opening of two multi-million dollar world class hotels - the Hyatt and Treasure Island ---as well as the $12 million refurbishing of the Holiday โกก.

With 20,000 companies registered in the Cayman Islands and over 500 banks, 2 large number of executives are able to combine business with pleasure. Several bankers even attribute some of the recent upsurge in business to the exceptional toutist accommodations.

The most remarkable thing about the Hyart is its style --more 1880s than 1987. No one would guess that it had its official opening last April.

The pale blue facades of its buildings sucround a pleasure garden of walks and fountains. Its golf course, designed by Jack Nicklaus, caters both to hotel guests and the members of The Britannia Club who own villas and condominiums on the vast acreage of the premises.

Britannia's villas and townhouses are being developed by Ellesmere, a subsidiary of AGRA Industries, one of the foremost diversified public companies in Canada, Britannia also owns the Hyatt, and Hyatt in turn manages the villas for their owners. According to Roly Guenette, vice president of operations for Ellesmere, the Britannia offers "an opportunity to invest in some of the most valuable property in the world," with the added attraction of Hyatt's management and the absence of taxes in Cayman. Development is perhaps the most heated issue in the palm tree-lined drive. extremely low-key political life of Cayman. That is, how much to develop, how quickly to do so and what to allow. "One-third of all our tourists come to snockel or dive," explained Eric Bergstrom, the government's director of tourism. "Now there is a tremendous increase in other activities, nightlife and sports like tennis and golf. There are a number of full-service resorts with scores of activities." Hotel development has been accompanied by an increase in aidine services, including daily Eastern Airlines flights from Miami and Northwest's service four times a week from Memphis. But Cayman Airways still greets the traveler with a welcoming rum punch and the soothing strains of Caymanian style calypso. There are also scheduled services from Houston, Tampa, Atlanta and charters from New York and Philadelphia. Before the advent of the large hotels, most tourists stayed in the condominium units clustered on West Bay Beach. The atmosphere there is reminiscent of another era, with the conservative West India Club set far back on a Quier, self-contained places such as the Tortuga Club on the East End specialize in diving and fishing and cater to the sports-minded. On the North End, there are the Cayman Kal and Villa Caribe hocels. At Rum Point, the Remeat and Driftwood Village both offer apartment accommodation.

Cayman boasts breathtaki beaches and world-class botels, like the new, 235room Hyatt Regency.

Cayman Brac has some truly lovely little hotels such as Tierra Beach, Brac Reef Beach and the Bucancer. All of these have professional dive operations. Little Cayman, according to Eric Bergstrom, has the finest Bone fishing in the world. In Little Cayman, people stay at the Southern Cross Club, Piranes Point (whose owner, a gourner chef, works wonders with the local seafood), and Sam McCoy's Diving Lodges. They all have six to eight rooms as well as bars and restaurants.

Most important, however, is the atmosphere in Cayman: the picturesque harbor and streets of Georgetown; the town square with its charming. obelisk clock and uninterrupted views of the sea.

"The treaty covers all crime mutually considered a crime. However, there are several obscure areas in this," said Peter Tomkins, president of Cayman National Bank. "For example, Cayman has no securities legislation per sc, and therefore we have no legislation making insider trading a crime. But insider trading can be considered fraud, and fraud is most definitely a crime in Cayman. Fraud as a crime versus insider trading as a crime, is really a matter of degree and will need to be defined on 2 case by case basis."

Initially there was opposition and much skepticism over the new law. Fearing that it might conflict with the important confidential Relationship Preservation Law, the Chamber of Commerce reserved comment until it saw the law in action.

The fact that we can sit in front of a Reuters screen and made anywhere in the world is very exciting. It is what has changed us from a passive market to a very active one."

Another major factor which has contributed to Cayman's financial success and about which Caymanian bankers are in unanimous agreement is the level of regulation that is guaranteed by the Inspector of Banks.

"Our regulatory system is second to none, and that gives the world's financial community total confidence that we are squeaky clean and as shelfrom shaky busine

ferson, "In the year since the treaty was signed we have had one of the largest growth penods in our history. After the treaty was signed, the three argest Japanese Banks established a presence here, along with others from Europe and Latin America. In this same period we grew to be the largest offshore banking center and the second largest center for offshore captive insurance companies after Bermuda. International bankers appreciate our self regulatory positions."

This sentiment was echoed by Anthony Travers of the law firm Maples and Calder, "This was partly because of events in other jurisdictions," he said. "But it is also due to the legitimizing factor of Cayman entering into the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty. The message that comes across from this treaty is that we don't have anything to hide. It distinguishes us from other offshore centers," he added.

"The very big players in the financial scene - the 500 registered banks, the investment banks, the finance houses of London, New York, Tokyo ---now have a very casy job of selling Cayman," Mr. Travers explained. "Compared with other offshore havens, it is known as the legitimate one."

Electrochemistry to Preserve Titanic's Relics

A World on a Grain of Sand

WASHINGTON (WP) - Two marine biologist has discovered a world in a grain of sand. In this case, the world is a colony of tiny animals called bryozoans that attach themselves to a grain of sand underwater and live out their lives - feeding, growing, reproducing - on a single sand grain.

Bryozoans, which constitute a phylum of their own, are sometimes called moss animals because they live most of their lives clustered together in thick patches fastened underwater to solid surfaces such as rocks and boat hulls.

The Taste of Fresh Orange Juice

WASHINGTON (WP) - Cornell University food scientists said that despite state-of-the-art chemical analyses, they still do not know why fresh-squeezed orange juice tastes better than the canned, bottled or frozen versions

They have, however, been able to rule out limonene, a volatile (rapidly evaporating) substance in the oils of fresh-squeezed juice that most processors had thought accounted for the difference. However, they have isolated several other volatile elements that do seem to account for the flavor difference.

The Cornell researchers, Anna Belle Marin and Terry E. Acree, disproved the limonene theory by asking volunteers to sniff several odors issuing from a special analytic device that separated out the chemical components of juice and pumped them out one at a time. Although onene at high concentrations has a lemony smell, volunteers could barely detect it at the levels that exist in juice.

Antibiotics and Salmonella Risks

CHICAGO (UPI) - The practice of putting antibiotics in animal feed to promote livestock growth may be creating resistant strains of Salmonella bacteria that will be difficult to treat in future outbreaks.

Scientists from the federal Centers for Disease Control reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association that they have noticed a marked increase in the prevalence of annibiotic resistant Salmonella, a bacteria found in milk and meat products and a common cause of food poisoning. Typically confined to the digestive tract, salmonellosis causes diarrhea, abdominal cramps, vomiting and fever.

By Barry James ARIS - Whether it was morally right to recover objects from the Titanic is a question of debate tween those who believe the ship's resting place two and a half miles under the Atlantic should be left inviolate and those who believe the public has a right to see at least a few of the tens of thousands of objects scattered in and around the vreck But now that the first objects have been brought to the surface, the question has become a scientific one of how to preserve them.

This week, more than $00 artifacts recovered during a twomonth French-American expedition that ended earlier this month were brought to the research laboratories of Electricité de France (EDF), the state electricity utility, where they will be subjected to a lengthy electrochemical process of restoration and conservation.

As long as the objects are kept in salt water they will remain in the same state in which they were found on the ocean floor. But if exposed to the air, they would crumble to dust within days or hours.

This is because salts that have penetrated the metal react with hydrogen and oxygen in the atmo-sphere to form highly corrosive hydrochloric acid. Other contamination is caused by hydroxides, oxychlorides, carbonates and sulfides. EDF's laboratory, housed in a cavernous factory in Saint-Denis, an industrial suburb porth of Paris, Guerot, a marine archaeologist. has developed remarkably effective methods of electrolysis to leach the contaminating chemicals out of archaeological relics.

They might never have been found with traditional methods, and they certainly could never have been restored to the pristine condition in which they are seen today.

The cannon was put on display at the Electra exhibition in Paris in 1983 to celebrate the centenary of the French Electrical Society and was later presented to the Museum of Modern Art of the city of Paris, The cannon immediately attracted the attention of museum restoradered off the Ile du Levant in the tion departments, leading to requests to carry out projects for the Louvre and the porcelain museum al techniques. The laboratory also carried out a superb restoration of a cannon recovered from the Napoleonic ship Le Patriote, which sank off the coast of Egypt in 1798. The cannon was donated to France by the Egyptian government. The EDF researchers are now planning to cooperate in the recovery and restoration of objects from the wreck of the Alabama, a celebrated Confederate blockade runner found by the French Navy in 1984 in water 60 meters (197 feet) deep off Cher-bourg. The ship, which captured or destroyed 65 Union ships during the American Civil War, was sunk led by Captain Guerot. Although electrochemical restoration methods are coming increas-ingly into use elsewhere, Mr. Montlucon said the EDF laboratory has probably amassed a broader experience than any other institution. Itis also carrying out research on the electrochemical treatment of 20thcentury materials such as aluminom and light alloys recovered from downed aircraft, and the restoration of archaeological artifacts dug out of the earth, which present a different set of problems to those recovered from the ocean.

Mr. Montlucon said EDF makes no profit from its unusual sideline. Instead he described the work as "a by the Union warship Kearsarge in transfer of technology from the June, 1864 during a dramatic battle world of industry to the world of

INTERNATIONAL MANAGER

As Dollar Falls, Consider Part Payment in, Say, Yen

By SHERRY BUCHANAN

onal Herold Tribune ANAGERS being paid in dollars and working in European countries and in Japan are hurting as the dollar continues to lose value against European and Japanese currencies. Even though many international compensation experts say the best way for managers to protect themselves against currency fluctuations is to be paid partly in dollars, partly in local currency, few U.S. companies give that option. And usually only U.S. executives on long-term assignments - meaning those longer than the average three-year assignment -ask for it.

"In most countries we recommend that companies split the expatriate pay by paying a portion in local currency," said Margaret Keyrouz, senior consultant at Organization Resource Counselors Inc. in New York. The company ad-vises 1,000 U.S., Australian and European multinationals on how to structure expatriate benefits. "That way people don't see their local currency salary fluctuate with the dol-lar."

In a survey by the firm published this year, only a third of 335 U.S. companies questioned said they gave executives going on assignment abroad the option to be paid partially in dollars and partially in the local currency.

The reason companies say they pay people in dollars is that administratively it is easier for them to keep U.S. managers on temporary assignment on the U.S. payroll. The survey did not ask how many executives who had the option to be paid partly in local currency took it.

In contrast, according to ORC in Paris, French companies usually pay their managers overseas partly in local currency and partly in francs.

It makes life simple for the expatriate. The best position to be in is to have your expenditure budget in local currency and your savings budget in home-base currency," said Peter Newhouse, senior consultant with ORC. "If you are moving yourself your dollars, say, into local currency, you know you are losing; if you are doing it the other way around, you are gaining. This method gives you stable budgetary targets for your expenditures."

HE FINANCE director of the French subsidiary of a large U.S. multinational, for instance, when he was transferred five years ago to Paris, decided he wanted to get the largest portion of his salary in French francs and a fixed portion in dollars. Thanks to this arrangement, he believes he has the best of both worlds and hasn't been hurt by the drop in the dollar. He uses his dollar portion to meet his U.S. obligations. Staving on the U.S. payroll also enables him to be eligible for U.S. Social Security benefits and keep a foot in the door at headquarters. Part of his decision to take split pay was triggered by the fact that his company does not offer any housing, education or costof-living allowances to protect overseas employees against a dollar drop. But even allowances have their drawbacks. Although many U.S. managers paid only in dollars are protected against a drop in the dollar by the allowances they get, they often complain they are still being hurt. The company only protects the portion of your income attributed to goods and services and to housing from a currency devaluation," said Mrs. Keyrouz.

By taking split pay however, many U.S. managers fear they will loose touch with headquarters. Being on local salary can make it more difficult to negotiate a satisfactory pay level when going back home, depending what the dollar's value will be then. By staying on the U.S. payroll, managers who have been abroad can more easily negotiate the next pay rise and promotion.

Bonn Is Closer to VW Sale Says It May Offer

16% Stake in '87 By Ferdinand Protzman

ational Herald Tribune FRANKFURT - The West German government may sell its stake in Volkswagen AG before the end of the year, Finance Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg said Wednes-day. The sale had been indefinitely postponed after a currency fraud scandal at the automaker earlier

The government will consider selling the 16 percent holding in 1987, Mr. Stoltenberg said, because the situation at West Germany's largest car maker has stabilized. He said a decision on a sale probably would be made in early October.

"The critical debate" centering on VW before an annual sharebolders' meeting in June had prompted the government to post-pone a decision until 1988 at the earliest, Mr. Stoltenberg said. His remarks sent VW's shares sharply lower on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange to end at 385.50 Deutsche marks ($211.29), off 9.50 DM from Tuesday's close.

"The market still has e lot of doubts about Volkswagen," said a broker for a West German bank. "The currency scandal looks to be about over, but it raised a lot of questions about the harmony and techniques of VW's management. And they still have problems in the United States and South America." If the government does sell its stake this year, it would "almost certainly have to be at very favorable terms," the broker said.

Questions about the company's management procedures and financial controls arose after VW re vealed March 10 that it would shoulder losses of 473 million DM resulting from fraudulent foreign exchange trading.

The company's Volkswagen of America Inc. subsidiary reported Wednesday that sales fell 13.7 percent in the year to Sept. 20.

For Australia's New Entrants By Mark Westfield

Slim Profits

New York Times Service SYDNEY - Two-and-a-half years after it was invited to apply for a banking license in Austra-lia, Morgan Bank has still not taken up the offer. The decision of the unit of J.P. Morgan & Co. to hang back may make it the envy of many of the 15 other international banks that quickly entered Australia after the government began a rapid deregulation of the financial system in February 1985.

Most of the new entrants, which include four large U.S. institutions, three Japanese banks and many other big names in international finance, have been scrambling for profits. The problem is that the influx of new contenders provided too many banks for a country of 16 million people and a gross na-tional product equal to $220 billion. Australia already had eight large national and regional banks, numerous smaller institutions and merchant banks.

Most successful among the newcomers are Bankers Trust Co., which chalked up a net profit last year of $25 million, and Citibank, which made $11.4 milhon. But those performances must be considered against hefry losses at National Westminster Bank PLC of $31 million and Royal Bank of Canada with $6.5 million. There were also more modest losses for three others, including Chase Manhattan Bank, and only small profits at most of the others. "The time of reckoning came a lot earlier than expected for many of the new banks," said Michael Cannon-Brookes, chairman of Citibank in Australia. "Eighteen months ago most of the new banks were asking consultants to work out strategies for growth," he recalled. "But suddenly, today, devising ways of catting costs as quickly as possible has become the priority."

The new banks encountered fierce competition in Australia.

convincing evidence that the U.S. trade deficit is improving. Economists have voiced concern that the improvement has not been tangible enough to dispel the bearish view on the dollar that prevails in the markets or to cool protectionist fervor in the U.S. Congress.

Whether the Reagan administration will waver in its support of the so-called Louvre accord in the bope that further declines in the dollar will speed improvement in the deficit is also worrying finance ministers of the Group of Seven industrialized nations, who will gather Saturday in Washington for private talks.

Those trading partners fear that another significant drop in the dollar will undermine the competitiveness of their own exports and imperil their lagging economics.

Undoubtedly, they will seek some assur-ances from the U.S. Treasury secretary, James A. Baker 3d, as they meet ahead of next week's annual conference of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank

Moreover, spokesmen for the Reagan administration have gone out of their way recently to assure the foreign exchange markets that the dollar's current value is producing positive results and that there is no reason for the currency to decline further. The dollar's current level is about 50 percent lower than it was in 1985.

The latest anxiety over the dollar is understandable. The U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives are already at work trying to reconcile their two trade bills despite the threat of e presidential veto. At the same time, the administration's political influence is being steadily croded by the bad news on the trade front.

Earlier this month, the Commerce Department reported that the U.S. mercha trade deficit widened to e record $16.47 billion in July from $15.71 billion in June. This capped three months of steadily worsening trade statistics and raised the prospect that 1987 would produce the worst annual trade deficit in history.

In addition, the trade deficit has emerged as one of the more visible issues for the growing by an annual rate of 8 percent compared with 4 percent for imports.

The improvement has been offset, however, by the rising values of imports, which have become more expensive in dollar terms because of the weaker U.S. currency. That paradox usually persists until consumers begin substituting cheaper, domestically manufactured goods for more expensive imports. But American consumers have been slow to make the transition, in part because of a perception that foreign goods are of better quality. Foreign manufacturers also have delayed the process by holding down prices in order to preserve their market share.

"I think the notion of a slow turnaround is even in doubt," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers, "It looks like these structural impediments to trade are overwhelming."

This has clearly increased pressure on the administration to take further steps to correct the trade deficit, either by acquiescing to some kind of congressional trade measures or by letting the dollar drift even lower. There's been progress, especially since the starting point was so miscrable," said C. Fred Bergsten, head of the Institute for International Economics in Washington and a characterized U.S. monetary strategy in 1986, the administration appears far less willing now to accept another decline in the dollar. This reflects a general fear that another sleep fall could push inflation to levels that might threaten U.S. economic growth.

Economists agree that the Reagan administration will abide by the Louvre accord for the time being. Some believe that officials want to hold the line on the dollar in bopes that the next trade figures, due in October, will show a substantial improvement.

Robert D. Hormais, vice president at Goldman, Sachs & Co. and a former assistant secretary of state for economic and business affairs, reckons that a $1.5 billion to $2 billion narrowing in the deficit could stifle congressional critics and bolster the administration's resolve to defend the dollar.

"Then the U.S. would probably intervene" in the foreign exchange market "a lot more." he said.

But if there is no improvement, the currency markets are bound to grow nervous. Givon the current climate, Mr. Bergsten says it is unlikely that the United States will launch any massive defense of the dollar if the markets are determined to push it lower.

COMMITTED TO GROWTH IN THE GCC

Commitment - the driving force behind the spirit of enterprise at Gulf Investment Corporation.

Commitment to assisting the diversification and expansion of the economies of the Gulf Co-operation Council (GCC) countries.

Commitment to the initiation of a new generation of vital industries and services in the region. Commitment to the active encouragement of investment by the private sector as partners in joint venture projects.

Two management groups spearhead this thrust - Projects Group. dedicated to the identification and evaluation of viable direct investment opportunities, and Finance Group, embracing corporate finance, portfolio management and treasury, and concentrating, among other things, on the promotion and development of regional capital market activities. A key factor in the strategy of success for both Groups is the stimulation of private sector investment, both by encouraging direct participation in Gulf Investment Corporation's various ventures and supporting the expansion of local stock market activities to promote wider private involvement in the . economic development of the region.

Gulf Investment Corporation, equally owned by the member states of the GCC, brings to bear a unique combination of experience, vision and resources to achieve the twin aims of growth and prosperity for the region. Commitment - more than just a word, here. More a way of life.

cense at some time," said R. Scott Nycum Jr., Morgan's Australia-based managing director. There are other obstacles than the reserve requirement. For example, the money that new banks may lend is restricted to 15 times shareholders' equity, a lower ratio than is allowed for the established domestic banks. Merchant banks can work from their parents' balance sheet and are almost unrestricted in their lending.

In Australia there is a clear distinction between banks and merchant banks. Banks can reassure depositors that the central bank, the Reserve Bank of Australia, will guarantee deposits, but in return for that privilege the banks must abide by a number of conditions. Merchant banks face far fewer restrictions, but lack the Reserve Bank's safety net. As a result they tend to pay more for deposits.

Consumer banking has proved difficult for most of the foreign institutions, and Bankers Trust's avoidance of that sector may be the key to its success. It made no a tempt to woo retail customers, in-stead concentrating on the fee-based advisory, underwriting and treasury pusinesses it had pursued successfully as a merchant bank.

Bankers Trust's operation in Anstralia was nominated for "best new venture" and best-managed bank in a recent survey of chief executives by a regruitment company, Egon Zehnder.

As for the other banks' performance, the sense of disappoint-ment has extended to the Austrahan treasurer, Paul Keating, who had been so enthusiastic in his wel-come of the new banks two years ago. He recently expressed regret that the new banks had not made more inroads into the marketplace.

CROSSING TO SAFETY

By Wallace Stegner. 277 pages. $18.95. Random House, 201 East 50th Street, New York. N. Y. 10022.

Reviewed by Alan Cheuse

DREPARE to hear the sound of trumpets! DREPARE to hear the sound of trumpets! DIt's the 50th anniversary of Wallace Stegner as a working novelist! That's correct, 50th! His first novel appeared in 1937, and "Crossing to Safety" — one of his best — has just been published, giving him a total of 15 works of fiction, as well as nearly a dozen works of nonfiction, at least one of which, "Wolf Wil-low" is fine enough a partative to make any low." is fine enough a narrative to make any serious novelist want to put his name to it.

There will be, I trust, retrospectives enough on the Stegner lifework (cailing the attention of readers who may have missed out on the pleasures and powerful dramas of novels such as "The Big Rock Candy Mountain" and "Angle of Repose" and the role of history in the present, and the family, and the forging of Western American culture, and the acute representation of the aging process, of our relation to the land, of theology and humanism in ordinary American life). So I'll focus on this current book, which recalls the old grand highway of novels about youth and age, family and friends, work and poverty and success and failure, sickness and health, loving and cherishing, the value of place and how to live with displacement, art and life.

Larry Morgan, the septnagenarian writer who tells the story, can take all the credit for that. From the beginning, his felicitous gift for making the ordinary into the beautiful catches our attention, from the odor of the air in the room in northern Vermant into which he wakes in the opening scene on through the portraits of academic life in a Midwest college town in the '30s and an upper-middle-class summer retreat in the old woods of Vermont. I watched, bewitched, as the story of Larry and Sally Morgan and Charity and Sid Lang unfolded with such ease before me; their love for each other and for life, their defeats and victories in their attempts to make ordinary decent lives in a world born of economic de pression and, later, global war. And I watched read quickly, fascinated with the way in which the novelist's novelist, narrator Larry Morgan makes the telling of his and his wife's and his friends' life stories the occasion for dealing with the larger issues that seem to have loomed behind most of Stegner's work. Thow do you make a book that anyone will read, "Morgan poses the question at an appro-vitate moment toward the e and of the 'out of lives as quiet as these?"

"out of lives as quiet as these? Where are the things the novelists seize upon and readers expect? Where is the high life, the conspicuous waste, the violence, the kinky sex, the death wish? Where are the suburban infidelities, the promiscuities, the convulsive divorces, the alcohol, the drugs, the lost weekends? Where are the hatreds, the political ambitions, the lust for power? Where are the speed, noise, ugliness, everything that makes us who we are and makes as recognize ourselves in fiction?"

None of these things, the elements that make up the materials of novels such as those written by everyone from Joyce Carol Oates to Robert Stone to Joan Didion to Richard Ford to Madison Smartt Bell and right down to and including just about everyone we read and praise, appears in Stegner's latest novel (though a touch here and there has shown up in come earlier books). Yet "Crossing to Safety" stands as a triumph because of these absences. not in spite of them. Stegner is a surpassing master at showing victory in the everyday ac-tivities of life, and though he admits to the darker places of the human heart, for who couldn't and still remain honest, he depicts a world in which, because of the angl- of vision, we see more by sunlight than shadow.

Consider the way in which Larry Morgan describes the prospect before him as he surveys the scene in Vermont where he and his wife Sally have been visiting the Langs for nearly 40 samy nive occur visiting the Langs for hearly av years. "The view from Folsom Hill," he says, "is not grand in the way of Western land-scapes. What gives it its charm is the alterna-tion of wild and cultivated rough woods ending with scribed edges against smooth hayfields — this and the accent dott of white houses and this and the accent dots of white houses, red barns, and clustered cattle tiny as aphids on a leaf. Directly below them, across the shagey top of a lesser hill, is the lake, heart-shaped, with the village at its southern end . .

This is a literary landscape, with its "scribed" woods and houses like "accent dots," and a literary landscape of a particular sort. It seems Virgilian almost, and not the Virgil of the "Acneid" but the younger poet who made the "Bucolics." The epic master of "Big Rock Candy Mountain" and "Angle of Response" ends here on a quiet, Eastern note, as the lyricist of the rational showing us his source, the New England lake, heart-shaped. 1.000

Tuesday's talks began as picket. lines, manned by large young men carrying signs that proclaimed "NFL Players on Strike to Honor Players Past, Present and Future," ringed many training camps. Only a few players crossed the lines Tuesday, but real confrontations, if any, could start when the 28 clubs begin putting together replacement these represent only a random dip into 600 exhibits on view. Visitors to the show (open through Jan. 14) will also have a chance to see a short film about the affair produced by the Pathe brothers in 1907, the year following Dreyfus's rehabilitation - an early "docudrama" that is curiously affecting, and by no means merely quaint. And then there are the works of art: paintings, prints, drawings, posters, sculpture, works by (among others) Degas and Rodin, Pissarro and Toulouse-Lautrec. While "The Dreyfus Affair:

Art, Truth and Justice" deals with broader political issues, the relationship between art and politics is one of its central themes. It both illuminates that relationship and leaves you asking a number of troublesome questions.

One temporary casualty, for example, as Norman Kleeblatt explains in his introduction to the catalogue, was Rodin's boldly unconventional Balzac monument. originally commissioned by the not cast until 30 years later. An even less predictable quarter in which the affair left its mark was in the work of the celebrated decorative artist Émile Gallé. He turns out to have been a passionate Dreyfusard, and the exhibition contains two vases and a table that he designed, all of them adorned with symbols or inscriptions that allude to Dreyfus's fate - on the table, for example, a Latin version of a verse from Isa-

Dreyfusard graphic artists alike kept up a steady volley of satirical images, and the exhibition abounds in specimens of work from both camps (incloding drawings from two journals that were devoted to cartoons about the affair, the Dreyfusard weekly Le Sifflet - The Whistle - and the anti-Dreyfosard weekly Past_1).

turists on the other side; there are some telling examples of their work on view. But with the single exception of Vallotton, none of the Dreyfusards are really in the same class as the most gifted of their opponents. A sad fact, but one that surely deserves to be explored for what it might reveal about the psychology and sociology of caricature.

And what of high art? Writing in the catalogue, Eugen Weber quotes a letter from Pissarro, reporting a fellow painter's remark to the effect that "if Dreyfus had been shot at once people would have been spared all this commotion." and adding that at Durand-Ruel, a leading art dealer, every-one agreed "except the doorman.

The lineup of artists was by no means as one-sided as this suggests: Monet, Vuillard, Pissarro himself were all Dreyfusards. But the anti-Dreyfusard roll call of painters was headed by an even more impressive group of names: Degas, Cézanne, Renoir.

I'm not sure what this proves, except negatively - that great art doesn't necessarily go together with desirable opinions. Beyond that, perhaps the best thing to do is to consider each case in its own individual context, as Linda Nochlin does in a fine essay in the catalogue ou Degas. In part, she traces the gradual surfacing and hardening of De-gas's anti-Semitism — for there was a time when it could truly be said that some of his best friends were Jews, the talented Halévy family (and Pissarro too). In part she tries to account for his prejudices in terms of insecurity about his family background. Do those prejudices affect our response to Degas as an artist? Hardly at all, since with a few rare exceptions he kept them out of his work. But Nochlin concedes that by doing so "he made it easy for us." We are grateful that there isn't a connection, and yet we find. it hard to believe that there can't have been.

In the meantime we can study such exhibits as Degas's portrayals of Ludovic Halevy, his boy-hood friend, or the splendid family photographs that have been grouped together to document the Degas-Halevy schism. We can sigh over the story they tell, and over some of the numerous other paradoxes that the exhibition records. And we can surely spare a passing cheer for that forgotten hero, the doorman at Durand-Ruel
